Plans For Livestock Field Day On May 5 Given By Glascock

Farmers and cattlemen from all sections of the state are expected to attend the first annual Livestock Producers Field Day at the University of Florida on Friday, May 5, according to Dr. R. S. Glascock, Agricultural Experiment Station animal husbandman and chairman of arrangements for the event. Address and general discussion on subjects of major interest to beef and pork producers, a beef cutting demonstration, an inspection tour of cattle and swine research units and swine, and a barbecue lunch will be features of the program.

which will begin at 9:30 a.m. and end at 4 p.m. Attending producers will be welcomed by Dr. J. Wayne Hollis, provost for agriculture at the University, and Director W. M. Priddy of the Agricultural Experiment Stations. Dr. J. Willis Miller, president of the University, will deliver an address after the barbecue lunch. Dr. T. C. Byrre, head of the animal husbandry division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, will discuss ways of improving efficiency in beef production.

J. Carlisle Rogers, of Leesburg, president of the Florida Bankers Association and a cattle raiser, will preside at a special panel discussion of current livestock production problems. The animal protein factor, vitamins B-12 and other comparatively recent developments in swine feeding will be discussed by Dr. T. T. Cumber, Agricultural Experiment Station animal husbandman, and the use of hay and citrus by-products in cattle feeding will be discussed by Dr. Glascock.

Methods of cutting beef and the value of the various beef cuts will be demonstrated and described by Dr. A. M. Pearson, also of the Experiment Station animal husbandry staff. This occasion will give all farmers who raise cattle and swine the opportunity to hear some of the authorities on animal husbandry, to get acquainted with research being done by the Experiment Station, and to confer with research men and themselves on their individual problems. All farmers are invited," Dr. Glascock said.

"The word 'energy' in connection with food often is misunderstood because it has many meanings. To the nutritionist, as to the engineer, energy means power from fuel or heat, and often is measured in calories or units. But many popular meanings of the word are vim, vigor, vitality, or drive spirit. Thus a housewife may conclude that the more 'energy food' her children eat, the more energetic they will be. And she may suppose that a food described as a 'quick source of energy' is needed especially by anyone who is fatigued or listless. Just the contrary may be true, nutritious foods of the U. S. Department of Agriculture explain. The so-called 'high energy foods' are the starches, sugars, and fats, because they are the chief sources of fuel or calories for the activity of the body. But, if used in excess, these foods are stored as fat, thus may make a person feel energetic. Too many of these foods in the diet may cut down on other nutrients, such as vitamins or protein, which the body needs for nutritional well-being and normal vim and vigor. The term 'fuel food' may be preferable to the more widely used 'energy food' to prevent this common misunderstanding. How much fuel food the body needs depends on its size and activities. A man doing heavy physical work or active in sports needs more than a man of the same size and build who sits at a desk all day and spends his evenings reading. If body weight stays about right, this is a sign that the body is getting enough fuel food for its needs. Overweight indicates a surplus of such foods. An active fast-growing teenager may need more fuel foods than his less active father, but care should be taken as to his choice of calories. Too many sweets, for example, or sweets between or before meals, may interfere with his appetite for substantial meals which provide varied nutrients for growth, health and vitality.

Vote Tuesday—Further savings of millions of dollars in freight rates for Florida shippers are in prospect if the present railroad commission is allowed to continue its fight, according to Jerry W. Carter, one of the two members seeking re-election. "Railroad officials have testified under oath before the Interstate Commerce Commission that the Florida Railroad and Public Utilities Commission has prevented them from collecting $2,000,000 a year in freight charges," said Commissioner Carter in concluding his campaign speaking tour. "This commission now is engaged in resisting efforts of the ICC to force higher rail freight rates on us. We expect to fight to the supreme court of the United States, if necessary, to prevent what we consider an discrimination against Florida shippers."

Jerry, as he is known throughout Florida, pointed with considerable pride to the recently successful Southern Governor's rate case, which he started and defended for more than 10 years before it was ended to the satisfaction of Florida shippers. He said the commission expects to continue its present program of expanding all transportation and communications—telephone and telegraph—into rural and suburban areas, with the cooperation of the utilities concerned. Carter was elected to the railroad commission in 1934, and has served since that time. He is a native of Alabama, has lived in Florida since 1906, is now 63 years old and is the father of seven sons and the grandfather of 14 boys and girls. He and Mrs. Carter live in Tallahassee.

Mr. Farmer . . .

The present congressman has failed the farmer seriously in allowing the excise tax on beans, tomatoes, cucumbers and peppers to be lower in our growing season than it is in the growing season of northern states. Thus Mexico and Cuba, with 60 cents a day labor, take advantage of this inadequate tax and flood our markets, causing our produce to hang on the vines.

As your congressman, I promise to bring about a correction of this lack of protection.

Clarence C. Stauffer

so rights-of-way and spoil areas and turned it over to the Government who deepened it to a depth of 8 feet and a width of 300 feet. The Commission never determined on the payment of interest on the bond issue, and finally in 1948 retired its bonds so that the District is tax free. At no time has the levy been more than one-tenth of one mill, but for the last two years, 1948 and 1950 no tax has been levied, made possible through careful planning and economical administration.

The Commissioner of Palm Beach County is one of 11 commissioners representing 11 counties of the District. The Commission has been working for an appropriation for a 13 foot depth, which has been approved by the Chief of Engineers and authorized by Congress, but have withheld pressure because of the immediate need of flood control in the Everglades.

Vote Tuesday—This is your government. Select the officials to run it by voting on May 2.

Buzzards Are Hogs About Young Pigs, Says Rancher—Buzzards are going whole hog over young pigs around here, a small local rancher reports. Dick Johnson says that Mexican eagles (just buzzards to me) have been harrying and in some cases destroying his young pigs.

Losing a litter from his ranch in back of Lake Harbor some time ago, he blamed the wild-litter. Recently he found a second litter with part of their ears and tails missing. After completely enclosing the pigs in a chicken wire pen, he noticed the buzzards hovered close for three days.

Joe Friedheim also reports the death of a baby calf probably caused by buzzards. Mounting evidence is leading ranchers to suspect the man-eating birds rather than wildcats as the culprits.

Vote your opinion on May 2. Gripping afterward is a waste of time.

- DWIGHT ROGERS represents the people who elect him—and well
- DWIGHT ROGERS doesn't wait till election to VISIT THE GLADES
- DWIGHT ROGERS has been and still is a WHEELHORSE ON FLOOD CONTROL
- DWIGHT ROGERS is a statesman, an American, a Floridian, and is in there "pitching"; friendships among both Democrats and Republicans pay off, and DWIGHT ROGERS is popular on both sides of the House.
- DWIGHT ROGERS is the father of the TERMINAL LEAVE pay for veterans; he introduced the bill to repeal the $5.00 use tax on cars and boats; he's a friend of WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION and the AGED and INFIRM.
